

RADIOWORLD

The Sound Of Static

A film by Dylan Finkbeiner and Vincent Tirri

LOGLINE

A lone man is stuck in an isolated experiment of external control and temptation.

GENRE

Dystopian

- Shows elements of the dystopian genre through the futuristic ideals of isolation, technological control, and constant surveillance.

Thriller

- Shows elements of suspense and mystery through the slow reveal and genre switch throughout the development of the film.

THEME

TEMPTATIONS AND HUMAN INSTINCT

- The idea of the experiment represented in RADIOWORLD tests the character's fall into temptation. DANIEL's instinct and curiosity guided him to breaking the rules of the society. However, this would lead to his failure in the end

FALLING VICTIM TO CONTROL

- GABRIELLA, the ADMIN of the experiment, must lead DANIEL to his fate. She hopes he does not give in, and apologizes after drawing his last X. She falls victim to the experiment just as much as DANIEL, knowing what happens if she were to also "fail".

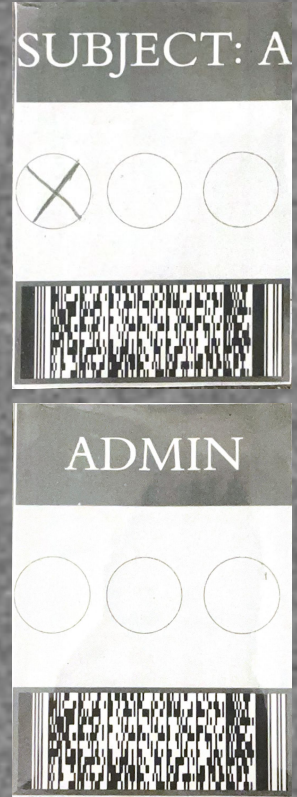

CHARACTERS

DANIEL:

- Referred to as SUBJECT: A. His age is 24. A curious mind, as he is knowingly stuck in his barren environment. He is stuck between brave and scared when facing his life, causing him to make difficult choices.

GABRIELA:

- Referred to as ADMIN. Her age is 21 and she is smart, staying loyal to her job, but feels a hidden empathy towards SUBJECT: A which conflicts with her duties.

SYNOPSIS

RADIOWORLD: The Sound of Static follows Daniel, or SUBJECT: A, the main character, and his day-in-the-life journey in the cycle of an unknown experiment. Even from the first minute of the day The Radio is controlling him. As he proceeds to his work building, he encountered a new character, Gabriella, or ADMIN, outside. They both silently walk in, going different directions. Daniel makes his way to his office, being constantly reminded about the rules he must abide to on the wall, “RULE 1: NO TALKING, RULE 2: REMAIN ON TASK. RULE 3: STAY TUNED IN.”. He has a tick mark on his ID, indicating he broke one of those rules. His ID shows there are only three chances. Daniel works in a stereotypical office space, alone, and struggles to focus on the work and abide by the commands and rules of The Radio, in boredom and annoyance

SYNOPSIS

When DANIEL gets a two minute break from work, he comes across Gabriella. She seems to be leading him down the hallway, opening and closing a door of an unfamiliar room on purpose to lure him inside. Daniel, falling into the temptation, enters the room which he's never been in before. Here he is exposed to the secrets of this society he has been yearning for. This Broadcast Room is filled with technology and broadcasting equipment. The Radio starts going off, giving him another tick mark, indicating he is breaking another rule. This leads him to finding the outlet source where pulls the plug, ending the experiment. Gabriella then gives his ID the last tick mark to note his fate, in a sympathetic way. Against her will, GABRIELLA slips a SUBJECT: ID into the lanyard.

SETTING

RADIOWORLD

The Sound Of Static

A film by Dylan Finkbeiner and Vincent Tirri